Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Directions for Making French Raised Worsted Work The piece I propose to teach is a lamp mat, sixteen inches square, with about forty flowers in ten varieties. - The materials required are a light frame, sixteen inches inside, wound with cloth; a piece of black velvet or broadcloth, sixteen inches square: a spool of No. 200; and one of No. 60 cotton; one quarter of a yard of thick white flannel; about one hundred and fifty knots of worsted, consisting of six knots of pearl white, and nine shades of red, orange, purple, crimson, gas green, yellow green, and four of blue. It is better to have twelve shades of orange and red. Let each color be shaded down, from the lightest to the darkest possible. If you cannot get the lower shades of orange, there are three or four shades of the darker scarlets that will do; one knot of each of the two darkest shades of each color. Of the remainder, obtain mostly medium shades. Sew the velvet or broadcloth on to the frame. Find the centre of the mat, and mark a square or circle the size you want the centre, where there are to be no flowers. To start on this work, place a dahlia in each corner of the mat, each of which will form the centre of a bouquet.
