The removal of Dr. Tappan produced the resignation of Dr. Brunnow, who now is filling the place of the great Encke in the Observatory at the University of Berlin. His chair is supplied by James C. Watson, late Professor of Physics, who has already signalized his advent to this important position, by the discovery of a new Comet, and also of a Planet, which he has honored with the name of Eurynome. The chair of English Literature is now filled by Dr. Haven, being formerly occupied by Professor Brooks, who is now performing the duties of Librarian. Dr. George P. Williams has been elevated to the chair of Physics, vice Professor Watson, transferred. His duties as Professor of Mathematics have long been too arduous for a man of his advanced age, and he now occupies a position of equal honor, and which subjects him...
