The bank then supposed A. to be solvent. Four days after, when the loan came due, A. paid the interest in cash, and offered in payment of the principal a check upon a third person. The cashier of the bank, supposing that the check was drawn against funds, delivered to him the certificate of stock in the same condition in which it was received, and also delivered to him the memorandum check marked as paid. A. had at this time no funds with the person on whom the check was drawn, and had no reasonable expectation of having any to meet the check, and in fact was insolvent. Later in the day A. redelivered the certificate of stock, but not the memorandum check, to the bank. Held, That the transaction did not amount to a payment of the loan, and that the bank was entitled to retain the certificate of stock as security for the loan as against the trustee of the estate of A. in bankruptcy. Holmes v. First Nat. Bk. of Fall River, 126 Mass. 353. An assignee in bankruptcy may sue a National Bank for usurious interest, he being within the terms legal representations as used in sec. 5198 of the act. Wright v. First Nat.
